The blood pressure was a little too much for my physical condition. A kind of dazed feeling was upon me much of the time. My. tendency to brain trouble was evidently increased. At different times I had a partial loss of memory and inability to get about without some appearance of being slightly intoxicated. Then a form of eczema attacked me upon almost all parts of my body, more especially on my lower limbs. This was of a very stubborn nature and refused to yield to ordinary treatment. This condition of things led my kind and skillful medical adviser to express himself as convinced that I ought to return to my home in the East; and I came to entertain the thought of doing so at an earlier date than I had intended. There were also some other reasons that may be noted further on; but these of themselves were sufficient and led me to the conclusion when some of the chief objects of my mission seemed to be accomplished as well as they could be, to arrange to get in the lower altitude again. When the arrangements were about completed they were brought to a temporary stand still; and I was threatened with an attack of pneumonia. My kind physician almost decided that I must defer the thought of starting...
